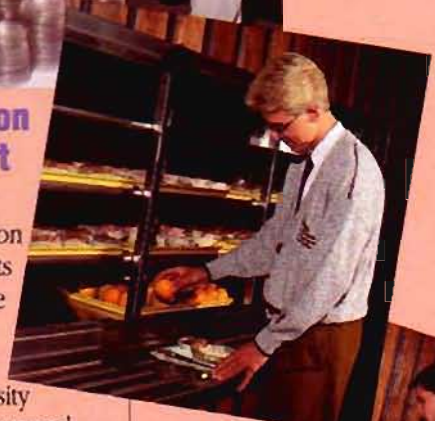
Campus News

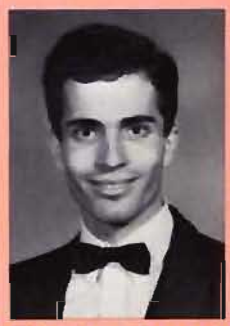


Dining Common gets a facelift

The Dining Common interior dressed up its appearance over the summer with new beverage stations at each end of the Varsity Room. An attractive wood wall completely hides the serving apparatus, giving greater permanence to the beverage and dessert arrangement. Refrigerators and added space make behind-the-scenes work much easier.

Dr. Fremont receives van

Dr. Walter Fremont, Dean Emeritus of the School of Education, was recently presented with a minivan, complete with a chair lift, by friends and alumni. Graduate Dayne Smith initiated the purchase, and Dr. Ken Hay of the Wilds made the presentation. Dr. Fremont suffers from Lou Gherig's disease.



Electronics student wins $25,000 for university in Motorola Contest

David Mohl, a 1990 BJU grad, recently won second place in the Motorola Design Contest. Motorola awarded the university $25,000 of lab equipment for his accomplishment. David entered a working model of a sophisticated car alarm which he had designed for a project in an electronics class at the university.

About the cover

Snow? In Greenville? Yes, every couple of years us "Southerners" get a few flakes—or a couple of feet! Snow sculpture contests bring out wild and wacky ideas, as well as the old standby, the snowman.

BJU Press begins new music publishing division

SoundForth, the new music publishing division of the BJU Press, recently released 20 new choral arrangements for churches and Christian school choirs. Eleven different arrangers, including faculty members and graduates, contributed to the initial release. Selections feature arrangements of favorite hymns and gospel songs as well as original works for unison, two- and three-part, and SATB choirs. For more information about the release or membership in the SoundForth Choral Club and its benefits, contact the BJU Press at 1-800-845-5731.

Student killed in plane crash

Dayne M. Baker, a junior aviation major, was killed August 5 when his plane crashed during a solo flight to his home in Mattoon, Illinois. Dayne, a licensed pilot and veteran of several cross country trips, went down during a fierce storm over London, Kentucky.

Cello instructor needed

Bob Jones University is seeking a full-time cello instructor with strong performance abilities and a master's degree or its equivalent. Related duties could include precollege string instruction and conducting one of the precollege orchestras or some other performance field, such as piano. Inquiries should be directed to Dr. Dwight Gustafson, Dean, School of Fine Arts, Bob Jones University, Greenville, South Carolina, 29614.

She'll teach 'em

"When I was in high school, people always said to me, 'When you get to the University, you'll major in speech, won't you?' And for a while I felt like that was the only thing in the world I could do—according to other people." So Shawn Arnold decided to surprise everyone and major in marketing.

But after struggling through accounting her freshman year, Shawn settled with the Lord what His will was for her. "Working in speech was what the Lord had given me a talent to do and I knew He wanted me to do it."

Shawn was adopted as a baby by a Christian couple living in Greenville, South Carolina. She has attended Bob Jones schools since she entered five-year-old kindergarten. Some people even ask her if she is a "faculty kid"! Now, a senior majoring in speech education, she is especially thankful for what she learned while at Bob Jones Academy.

"In the Academy I was involved in many individual events in the Academy Forensics program. Mr. Chuck Nicholas, my speech coach, worked with me, and I really loved it!"

When it came time for college, Shawn wanted to try something different. "I started in marketing, but then I began to realize how right those 'other people' were. Speech was what the Lord had for me!" After considering her options, she settled on a speech education major.

Now that Shawn has settled that the Lord definitely wants her in speech, her greatest enjoyment is coming from her education classes. "Everyone tells me that they hate those 'hard' education classes, but I love them!" she says. "In every education class I have, I get more and more enthusiastic! People tell me I'm going to be disillusioned, but if you have an initial love for the kids then you can take it from there. I'm so excited and ready to teach!"

This summer Shawn was given an opportunity to use her talent in speech. "I really desired a ministry this summer. The last three summers I've been working in camp ministries. This summer I wanted experience in directing something, and when I asked our music director at church if I could do a small patriotic program with the youth, he mentioned it to our pastor." As a result, Shawn was asked to direct 15 teenagers in a patriotic program of speech and song.

Shawn has kept a class load of 18-20 hours a week because she plans to graduate in three and a half years in order to start teaching as soon as possible. During her freshman and sophomore years, Shawn played piccolo in the band and the orchestra. On top of this busy schedule, Shawn works part time at Global Resources Organization, Ltd., an agency that helps people find overseas jobs.

One of Shawn's greatest desires is to continue the excellence in teaching that she has seen while studying at Bob Jones University. "I appreciate BJU so much. Recently, I gave a brief tour of the campus to an older couple, and even with all the construction going on, they remarked, 'Boy, this is a fine place! Everything is so well kept from inside to outside every minute detail!'

"BJU is not satisfied with the mediocre, and that's what I appreciate the most about this school." ■

The adventure

of a Lifeline

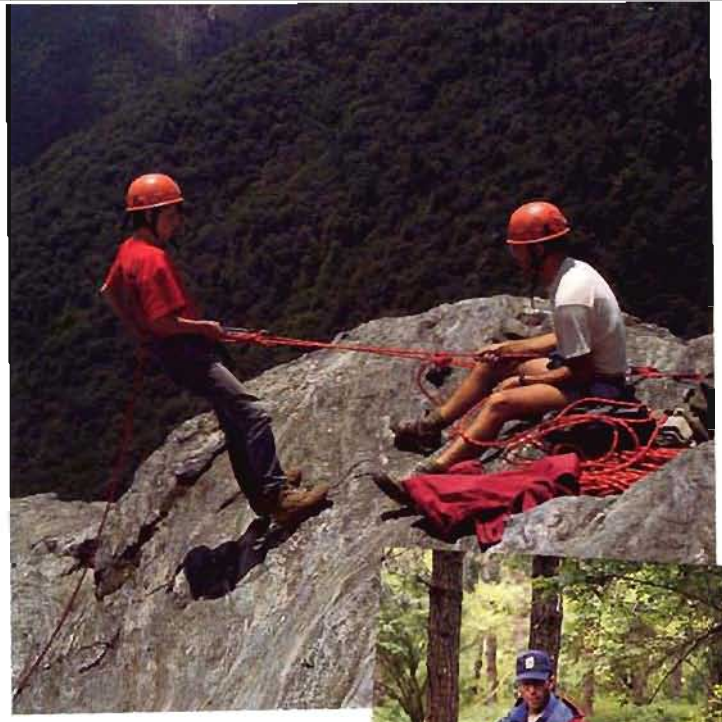
"I thought that by coming to BJ and doing what God wanted, I'd be throwing away what I wanted to do," says Dan Mittan. "I grew up in Nebraska and always loved the outdoors. I wanted to be a game warden, and I fought like crazy coming to BJ!"

But, fortunately for Dan and the 100 teenage guys that have been under his ministry, he made it to BJU. He majored in church administration and graduated in 1979, setting off a string of events that God used to land him at his current ministry.

Over the next four years, Dan worked as a sheriff's deputy, studied at the Wilds Camp Directors Institute, and worked as a counselor at Green Valley Boys Ranch in Louisville, Mississippi. His time at the Boys Ranch gave him an idea for a Christian wilderness camp, and Dan began researching the possibilities.

He heard about a school for wilderness camp leaders in Wyoming and went out and took the three-week course at the National Outdoor Leadership School.

"It was 18 days of straight backpacking. While I was there, I saw even more the need for a Christian wilderness camp. At the secular camps, you are exposed to whatever philosophy of life the leader has. I could see immediately the need for a camp with a Christian emphasis."



The next step the Lord had for Dan was marriage to a girl he met in college. "I had worked on security with her at BJ, but after we graduated, the Lord kept crossing our paths," Dan says. "I finally realized that maybe God was trying to tell me something, and we were married."

It was during this time that Doug Herring at the Green Valley Boys Ranch followed up on Dan's idea to start a wilderness camp. He began one in Mississippi in conjunction with the Boys Ranch and asked his son, Chris, and Dan to be co-directors. The program, called Lifeline Ministries, began in July, 1985.

Lifeline Ministries is devoted to reaching teens. "We want to show the real lifeline, Jesus Christ, to them." The program is divided into seven sections, with the wilderness adventure camp as the backbone.

"Camp lasts for 14 days and becomes increasingly difficult," Dan says. "The first week consists of backpacking, usually in North Carolina. The second week is mostly base camp oriented, with activities such as rock climbing and whitewater canoeing."

Each session takes 12 campers and four counselors or instructors. Many of the participants are recommended by courts or social service agencies. "These kids are struggling with reality. We're trying to teach them that reality is 'where is your soul going to be when you die?' Our stated objective is to bring each young man to a personal relationship with Jesus Christ."

Although the program has been highly successful and each camping trip is full, finances can be tight. "For a while we were subsidized by Green Valley Boys Ranch, but eventually it became too hard for them to keep up their support," Dan says.

Because they charge the participants only a nominal fee, they must depend on support from others to keep the camp operating. Much of their support comes from interested businesses and through a few churches who support the camp as a missions project. "We would like to add further paid staff, but we'll just have to trust the Lord to supply our needs."

As the program matures, Dan is planning variations in the standard program. "I'm thinking about selecting some of the 'graduates' who are doing well and spending some time helping on a missions project and backpacking in the Southwest," Dan says. Other plans include a one-week camp for entire youth groups, and an advanced program for those who have already been through the basic camp but want to come back again. "This will give them something different than what they've already seen."

Meanwhile, Dan plans to keep trusting the Lord. "What's really amazing is how the Lord has kept the outdoor in the forefront of my life, even after I gave myself to Him. I claim the verse in Proverbs, 'A man's heart deviseth his way; but the Lord directeth his steps.'" ■

America has become a howling wilderness of anti-Christian bigotry and amoral idiocy. A literary hero of mine, James J. Kilpatrick, addressed the "amoral idiocy" part so well that I requested his permission to reprint the following for our readers.

"WASHINGTON– Marion Barry, the eminent junkie, mayor of our nation's capital, is a happy man these days. This past Friday a federal jury acquitted him outright on one misdemeanor count of possessing drugs, convicted him on another minor count, and failed to reach a verdict on 12 other charges.

"For all practical purposes, the case is over now. The judge has declared a mistrial. At a sentencing session on Sept. 17, Barry will get a first offender's tap on the wrist. At the same time, prosecutors will announce if they intend to seek a second humiliation by going back to court. Most observers regard a retrial as unlikely. The feeling is that no jury in Washington, D.C., ever will convict Marion Barry of perjury or any other felony rap. His Honor has become a hero.

"One word suffices to describe this anticlimactic outcome. The word is disgraceful. Over a period of nearly six weeks, prosecutors offered the jury overwhelming evidence of the mayor's criminal conduct. The talismanic phrase in jury trials is 'reasonable doubt.' It is not just difficult to understand— it is impossible to understand how reasonable doubt could have remained after the two sides rested.

"The most telling, ineradicable, utterly convincing evidence came from the mayor himself. In a sting operation, the FBI videotaped Barry smoking a pipe of cocaine— head back, eyes closed, the rapturous expression of a true junkie spread across his face. On this count the jury reportedly split 6-6.

"The jurors who voted for acquittal thought the government had been unfair in trapping the defendant. A defense of entrapment is a matter of law, to be decided by judges; the act itself was a matter of fact, to be weighed by jurors. This jury, ho-ho, weighed the tape with a thumb on the scales. Behind her blindfold, the lady of justice wept.

"In this hour of pure disgust, perhaps it is a mistake to see dark messages in the jury's abdication. One wonders all the same. What sort of message did this fiasco send to law enforcement officers? Why should they risk their lives to make drug arrests hereafter? What does Barry's triumph say to the beleaguered government of Colombia? Why continue the fight? Surely the mistrial says something to those who deal in illicit drugs. Sell at your pleasure, boys! If the government can't get Barry, the government can't get you.

"More than this. The law is supposed to be one of the great civilizing influences of our society. Constantly we are told that ours is a government of law, not of men. We are expected to believe in the even-handed administration of justice. The jury system is enshrined in our Constitution, but respect for the system is bound to be diminished when the system produces a result so grotesque.

"The Barry trial comes as one more failure in a string of failures. The church, like the law, is also a civilizing influence. What have we read of the church lately? We are surfeited with larcenous preachers and libidinous priests. Old rites, old hymns, beloved rituals disappear in efforts to appease the false god Progress.

"Congress is the legislative arm of federal law. What of its influence? We see a bitterly partisan body, frittering away time and money, slaving for re-election, unable to act responsibly on a budget. Who respects Congress?

"What of the arts? The jurors who winked at Marion Barry are no more disgraceful than the jurors who recommend grants from the National Endowment for the Arts. A few members of the Barry jury tried to uphold old values; they refused to acquit on 12 of the 14 counts. Those who voted to convict had some sense of the public interest. Panels at the NEA solemnly ponder mediocrity and solemnly declare it art.

"Does music have charms in today's society? The airwaves vibrate with the oxymoronic noise of 'classic rock.' Lyrics of many recordings are so obscene that they must be sold with warning labels. It becomes increasingly difficult to find a movie not characterized by pervasive profanity, senseless violence and the debasement of sexuality.

"The corruption extends to education and to the world of finance. While the bureaucracy slept, men looted the savings and loan associa-

"In this sad perspective, Barry's triumph may not seem so revolting after all. His knee slapping supporters are on the winning side. Let jubilation reign! It reigns with a manic grin, while the lights dim and the fabric rots." ©1990, Universal Press Syndicate

Does not the Bible describe this day when it says, "Judgment is turned away backward, and justice standeth afar off: for truth is fallen in the street, and equity cannot enter"? (Isaiah 59:14)

In the midst of this dark hour God has raised up Bob Jones University to help young people sort through the confused thinking and distorted values of this generation and to build their lives on the eternal values of God's unerring judgment, the Holy Scriptures. This institution of higher learning stands unashamedly for the Book of Highest Learning, the Bible.

Our graduates enter the darkness of this world with the only weapon which can confront the darkness—LIGHT. Does that make the ministry of Bob Jones University strategic, or what?

College Financing Tips

by Roy Barton
Director of Financial Affairs

The Turn-of-the-Century has arrived at BJU—ten years early. For 15 students, the Turn-of-the-Century Club is their way to Bob Jones University.

This group of students is the first members of the Club to attend BJU, and their savings are substantial. Current 1990–91 room, board and tuition fees are $6480; but, by enrolling in the Turn-of-the-Century Club, these students paid only $5160, the rate in 1986, the year they enrolled. A savings of over $1300—not a bad deal!

For those of you who feel like saving a substantial amount of money, we have extended the Turn-of-the-Century Club program for a fifth year, for students enrolling from 1994–2003. It is possible to prepay all four years of a child's education at today's rates if that child is due to enroll as a freshman at BJU during any of these years. Your total savings, based on the current prices, could be as much as $5200!

Here's how it works: as a member of the Turn-of-the-Century Club, you can pay your child's room, board, and tuition during the next 24 months at the 1990 rate! This investment opportunity covers the child's schooling regardless of the rates in effect at the time he enters BJU as a freshman.

You can pay in one lump sum, semi-annually, quarterly, or monthly. As long as you start your Club payments by May 31, 1991, you can take up to 24 months to complete your payment program. You can pay for all your children, as long as they will be freshmen at BJU between 1994 and 2002, and save even more. If for any reason your child is not able to attend BJU, every penny of the money you've paid into the Club will be refunded to you.

Grandparents too can join the Turn-of-the-Century Club. Proverbs 13:22 says, "A good man leaveth an inheritance to his children's children," and I can't think of a better gift grandparents can give their grandchildren than providing for their education at "The Opportunity Place."

The BJU Turn-of-the-Century Club offers parents and grandparents the opportunity of being the best possible stewards of the Lord's money while, at the same time, paving the way for the next generation to have the educational background and Christian training necessary to stand for Christ in a changing world.

Not your ordinary shrink!

"I never wanted to teach, but now that I'm doing it, I love it!" says Dr. Greg Mazak, BJU psychology professor.

"As a high school student I knew I wanted to work with people. So when I was in college, I decided to major in psychology in order to help people and make lots of money. Now, as a Christian, I realize the way I can help people most is by showing them that the Bible can help them to solve their problems."

Greg grew up in a Catholic family near Cleveland, Ohio. "My parents were very moral people and taught me that there were definitely things you DID and DID NOT do!"

Greg went to a Catholic high school where he met his wife-to-be, Nancy. After high school, he attended Ohio State University and graduated in 1983 with a B.S. in Psychology. It was during his college years that Greg heard the gospel and accepted Christ as his Saviour. "The gentleman who shared the gospel with me was a graduate of Bob Jones University, and so was the pastor of the church I began to attend. When I began thinking about where I would like to do graduate work, I considered BJU because I knew people from that school whose opinions I respected."

The summer following Greg's graduation from college, he and Nancy married and moved to Greenville where Greg enrolled in the Master of Divinity program at BJU. "I originally planned to get a M.Div. and then a Ph.D. in Psychology. But I realized that studying the Bible was more beneficial than studying Psychology. I just asked the Lord to open up the right door for me."

And He did. Greg has taught at the University for four years—two as a graduate assistant and two as a faculty member. During this time, he has been able to finish the course work, exams and dissertation required for his doctorate in New Testament Interpretation.

Greg is involved in nearby Trinity Bible Church where he is the youth pastor and Sunday school teacher for the junior and senior high. He spends his free time walking, reading, preparing for the six courses he teaches, and rooting for his old "hometown" football team, the Cleveland Browns.

Some people have a rather discouraging picture of psychology teachers. But Greg does his best to make the class exciting. "A big part of teaching is keeping the students interested, so I try to do things in my class that are fun and entertaining. I feel that if I can show my students that what we are covering can be fun AND applicable, it will become meaningful to them and not just textbook."

Even though he likes to have fun, there is a serious side to Greg's psychology. "I went through college unsaved and living a very sinful lifestyle. Because of that, I am very thankful to be a Christian, while many of my students take their Christian homes and families for granted. That is one thing that I try to convey to my students—how good God has been to them."

"I also try to challenge them to think—logically and Biblically. Many students come here having been told all of their life that certain things are right and wrong, but they don't know why they believe those things. I like to challenge them to know what they believe and why. It's all part of the psychology of the Christian life." ■

So you need a job, huh?

Hello. This is Yvonne Williamson. May I help you?"

"Yes. I mean—I'm not sure. I'm looking for some help in getting a job after I graduate. Is this where I need to call?"

Getting a job?! For some students the very thought of looking for a future job makes them nervous. One of the newest services of Bob Jones University, the Career Development and Placement Office, is designed to help alleviate these anxieties.

The office is staffed by Mr. David Williams, who has worked in education and psychology for more than 30 years. Since it was started over a year ago, the office is still expanding its services to meet the needs of BJU students. "We work with a variety of students, but I enjoy that," says David. "We're here to be a supportive office for any student who needs help."

A big responsibility for the office is helping seniors to prepare to go out and find where the Lord wants them to be. To assist these students, the the office conducts many resume writing and interview workshops each year. "If you don't have a good resume, you won't even get an interview," says David. Each session lasts approximately 45 minutes and teaches students what constitutes a good resume, how to put their own resume together, and finishes with an opportunity for any general questions. After that initial introduction any student can set up appointments with Mr. Williams to work out any additional problems.

The career office is also busy expanding its recruiting contacts so that students can have the best possible chance of finding a job through an on-campus interview. One of Mr. Williams' main tasks in the summer is to get as many companies as possible to come and recruit on the campus. And this February the University plans to host a Career Fair inviting many companies to come and recruit.

Although many students think that the office provides assistance only for those who seek employment, David also helps students who are having trouble academically. "This year my secretary and I have developed a test especially geared towards freshmen but also for any student recommended to the office by faculty or administration," says David.

"The test is designed to break down a student's study patterns into seven major areas. When a student is finished I look at the test with him, talk about what some of the scores mean, and give suggestions for improvement. We have found this program especially helpful for those who are completely new to Bob Jones University."

The Career Office has been very successful in locating jobs for those students in need of employment. David actively stays in contact with firms in the Greenville area, such as Michelin, as well as nation-wide. The office has placed graduates with companies such as JC Penney, General Medical Corporation, the U.S. Government, and the accounting firm Deloitte & Touche, to name just a few.

"Our main objective is to help the students to be content in whatever field the Lord wants them to be in." ■

MICHELIN

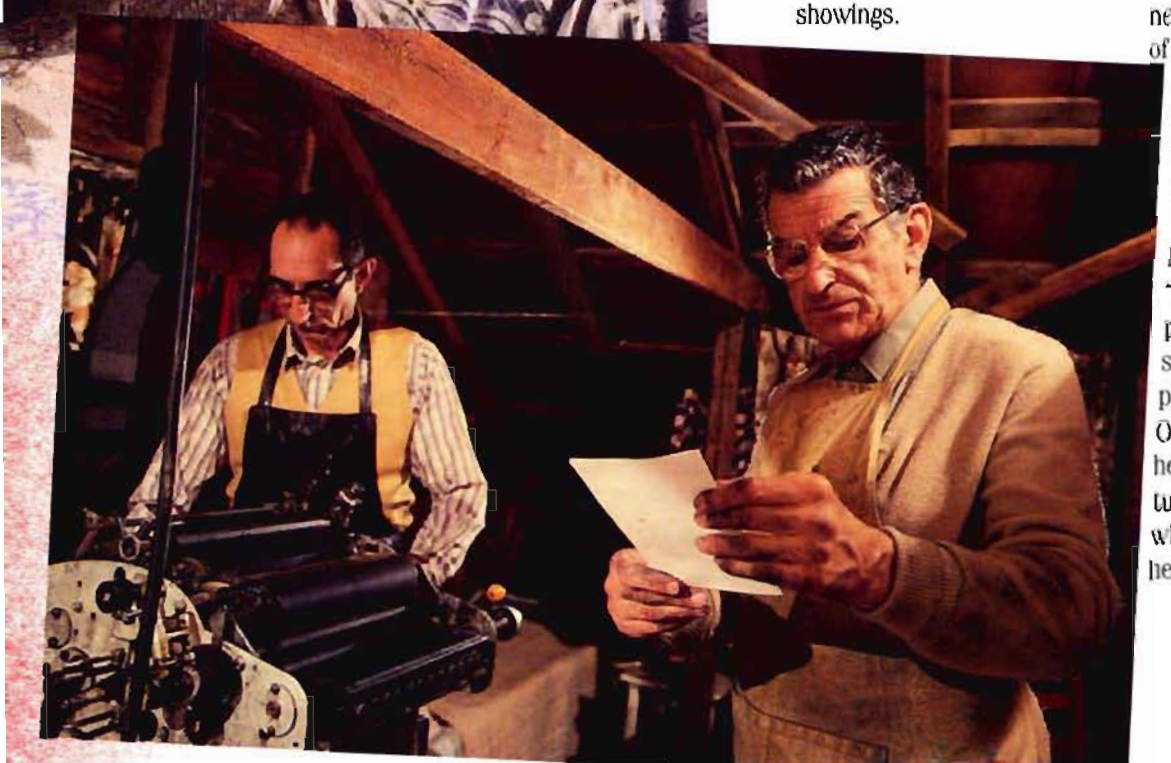
The Making of...The PRINTING

A high-speed chase on icy roads in a village outside of Leningrad results in the driver of a truck being arrested by the KGB.

Not what you would normally expect from a production by Unusual Films, but that's exactly what it is: a scene from The Printing, BJU's new feature-length film about Christians in pre-perestroika Russia. The film will premiere Thanksgiving weekend, and over 10,000 people are expected to be on campus for the three simultaneous showings.

In the film, a group of Christians in Russia are printing Bibles, and the KGB knows it. The problem is, they can't find them. The fictional, but fact-based, story deals with the KGB's quest to find the "criminals;" the deceit about the freedoms of Christians in Russia fostered by the KGB and the registered, state-controlled church; and one man's struggle with himself, his father, and the Bible-printing Christians.

Filming began in 1989 and was completed just this past May. The summer and fall was spent editing, adding sound effects and composing and performing the music. Most of the scenes were filmed in Greenville and neighboring towns, but some of the winter footage was shot at property owned by the Northland Baptist Bible College in northern Wisconsin. "Everyone was very helpful," says Tim Rogers, director of the film. "We had no trouble getting permission to film on the streets of Greenville, and the president of Northland, Les Ollila, went out of his way to help us. For example, he turned over the school's whole maintenance crew to help us out.



"We began our actual preparation for the film in March of 1986 by talking to Georgi Vins, a Christian and former "political prisoner" in the Soviet Union," Tim says. Several members of the cinema faculty made a trip to Russia in the fall of '86 to learn more about the state of Christians in Russia and about scenery and settings.

Between the time the script was written and the filming was finished, there had been a number of changes in Russia's treatment of Christians, prompting a new look at structure of the film. "We are setting the film in pre-perestroika Russia, but we are not that concerned about the political climate," Tim says. "We try to deal with eternal issues rather than politics."

And eternal issues are displayed prominently throughout the film. There is both a strong salvation message and a challenge for believers to stand up and be counted for their faith. Neither message is lost in the storyline or action of the film.

"The Lord has really been good to us," Tim says. "We only lost one day of shooting to weather, and that was because there was a wind chill of 60 degrees below zero. We can't afford all of the tricks that Hollywood can, yet the Lord has led us to the right people and the right places to get the job done." ■

Creative Aerobics

This low-impact aerobic exercise program meets the experts' prescription for improving cardiovascular fitness and metabolizing excess fat. A wide variety of beautiful music accompanies it. The routine provides for beginning, intermediate, and advanced participation. (44:00)

Creative Conditioning

This dynamic exercise program gives the Christian woman an opportunity for enjoyable exercise. The music is consistent with Biblical standards. Three separate exercise routines conform to various levels of physical capability. The program has a low-impact aerobics variation. (47:42)

Features from Unusual Films

Flame In the Wind

Set in the splendor and terror of the Spanish Inquisition is a drama of heroic Christian faith. Carlos, an earnest young nobleman, must choose salvation in Christ through the Scriptures or safety and respectability with the church. (2:00:00)

Red Runs the River

This is the story of two wars–one in the heart of General Richard S. Ewell, and the other on Civil War battlefields. The influence of General "Stonewall" Jackson's vigorous faith on the profane, unbelieving Ewell causes Ewell to realize that surrender to God brings true victory. (1:30:00)

Sheffey

Actual events from the life of Robert S. Sheffey tell the story of a greatly loved nineteenth-century circuit rider. As you ride the Appalachian mountains and hollows with this pioneer preacher, you will find courage, forgiveness, laughter, and tears. (2:15:00)

Wine of Morning

A story of bloodshed and shipwreck, of love and redemption, Wine of Morning traces the life of Joel, a promising young man who turns outlaw to free his people from Roman tyranny. As "Barabbas," Joel becomes the murderer and robber the mob chooses to release instead of Christ. (2:00:00)

Christmas Music

The Joyous Sounds of Christmas

Choir, ensembles, soloists, and the Bob Jones University student body sing the joyful songs of Christmas. The selections, heard in Hi-Fi Stereo and set in both historical and modern scenes, include "Joy to the World," "Jesus, Jesus Rest Your Head," "God Rest Ye Merry, Gentlemen," "Angels We Have Heard on High," and others. Your spirits will be lifted as you listen again and again to these timeless Christmas melodies. (23:05)

$7,800,000

That's the amount of money BJU students have received during the past 4 years through outright grants and work programs. We think it says a lot about our commitment to help students pay for college.

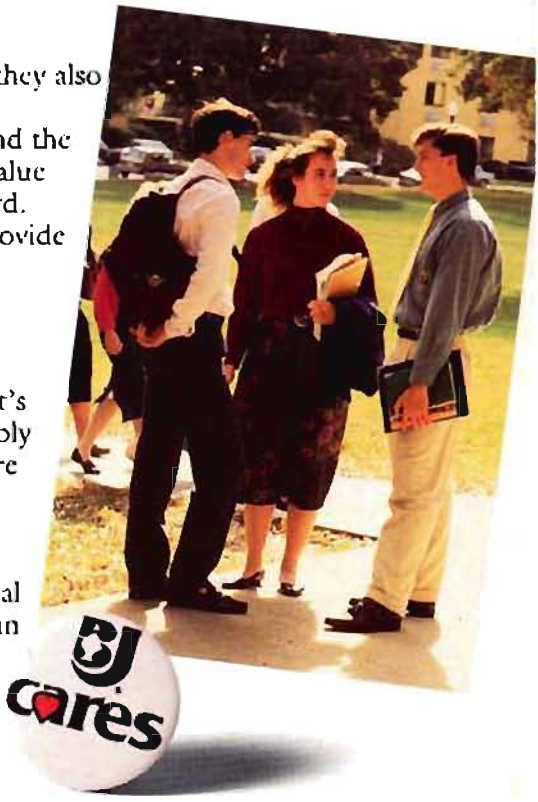
The founder's commitment. . .

When Dr. Bob Jones, Sr. founded Bob Jones University, he made a commitment that the university would do "everything in its power" to help students who are willing to work make it through college. That same financial commitment is alive and well at today's BJU.

Money isn't everything. . .

While our students work hard to get an education, they also know money isn't everything.

Through Bible classes, the daily chapel programs, and the Lord's working in their hearts, they understand the true value that comes from a proper knowledge of God and His Word. Many learn great lessons in faith as they rely on God to provide their needs.



We're doing everything we can to help. . .

College costs a lot. We understand that. We know families must stretch to put children through college. That's why we're running the most cost efficient school we possibly can and trying to raise all the private funding we can. We're working hard to make BJU the best value in Christian education today. More than that, we're doing everything possible to help students financially.
